Ruth Sit

Ruth Sit may be petite, but don't let that fool you. She was on the Hong Kong Olympic team for weightlifting! We're sure that skill helped in her career as an international trade lawyer in Hong Kong, focusing on supply chain restructuring and assisting multinational corporations for new market entry across Asia as well as trade regulatory matters in the US, China and Hong Kong. Ruth studied for her first law degree at Queen Mary College, University of London; more recently, she received her Master of Laws from George Mason University in Virginia. She and her husband relocated from Hong Kong to Washington D.C. early this year. They'd only planned to visit their Vero Beach house for a summer vacation, but then they fell in love with the area and decided to live here full time! Ruth heard about Impact 100 from her neighbor Kay Harvey and was impressed with what Impact 100 has done in the local community. She looks forward to joining the effort to make an "impact," and meeting more amazing women in Impact 100. In her spare time, Ruth likes watching soccer, cooking and baking, as much as doing Crossfit and continuing with Olympic lifting.

Carla Mangiafico

Carla Mangiafico is no stranger to Vero Beach. She and her husband moved here in March, but she has been coming here for more than 50 years, as both her grandparents and parents spent their winters here.

Although she and her husband spent the past 35 years living in Connecticut, they now plan to spend winters in Vero and summers at their home in Orleans, Massachusetts. Carla graduated from the University of Massachusetts in Amherst with a B.S. in business and accounting. She worked at Cigna for more than 25 years in various accounting, finance, and project management roles. She retired in 2017 but still does some consulting for Cigna. She and her husband Tom are members of The Moorings Yacht and Country Club. Carla heard about Impact 100 from her friend, Kathleen LaCroix. She loved the idea of a group of women making the impact and that the grants are large enough in size to make a difference in the community.
